

Principal Charles A. Bloomfield Retires

What can we say? This is hard for us all. Mr. “B” has ended his ninth year of service at Lehigh Valley Christian High School and will retire this summer. All together he has invested 43 years in Christian education. Through those years, Principal Bloomfield has selflessly poured himself into the lives of students and teachers alike. “During the past year he has served as my mentor, advisor, counselor and friend,” shares Mr. Robert J. Brennan, Jr., Head of School. “He does so much behind the scenes to keep this school running smoothly.

None of us will fully realize the extent of his service until we try to go on without him this coming year,” adds Mr. Brennan.

While there is no way that LVCHS can possibly “thank” Mr. B or honor him appropriately, we are sure that there are many treasures stored up in heaven for this fine educator and advocate of Christian Education. May God richly bless you and your dear wife Carolyn as you move on to your next ministry. We are deeply grateful to you for taking LVCHS through accreditation and for shepherding us through our greatest growth years... and most importantly, for demonstrating Christ-like love to scores of students, teachers and colleagues. Thank you, and God bless you.
